

About Susan

Susan over the last 13 years has studied and mastered a wide range of therapies and gained a wealth of experience in clinical practice.

This has been backed up with a solid academic foundation; a Master of Arts Degree in Complementary Health Studies from Exeter University, UK.

Susan's experience includes practicing at a private hospital, giving lectures alongside Specialist Medical Consultants showing the role Complementary Therapies play in health care, teaching workshops to both professional and lay persons as well as maintaining her own successful private clinic.

All the therapies Susan practices are able to stand alone or when necessary be integrated into a treatment session to give the client the best possible outcome.

It has always been Susan's drive and belief, that there is much to gain by integrating Complementary Therapies with the best practices of Medical Science. She continually forges links with orthodox health professionals to combine all forms into an integrated whole, thereby embraces the best of both worlds for everyone.
